Sodexo makes informed choice with new appointment

Sodexo, a leading food and facilities management services provider, has today announced the appointment of Kevin Fitzpatrick as its chief information officer for the UK and Ireland.

Kevin joins Sodexo with a wealth of experience, previously being vice-president & chief technology officer for US company Manpower, IT director at GE, and over 19 years held various roles at Honeywell.

Kevin will be responsible for all aspects of the IT function across the company's business in the UK & Ireland. In addition to company technology, he will be responsible for operational process design - including the identification and delivery of business process.

Kevin will be reporting to the newly-appointed finance director, Aidan Connolly.

Kevin said: "I'm delighted to be joining Sodexo at such an exciting time and ensuring that IT fully contributes to meeting our business plans. We already have solid IT services, but I will be looking to raise the bar on our project delivery - to ensure we are able to respond even more quickly to our customers needs."
